

SCARLET FEVER

Scarlet fever is strep throat accompanied by a rash. The rash usually appears 1 to 3 days after the sore throat starts, resembles a red flush and feels sandpapery. It often leads to the skin peeling for a few days approximately 2 weeks later. Although scarlet fever is no more serious than strep throat, an office visit is required to confirm a diagnosis.